Twentieth Infantry With Field Equipment Leave In the Morning Will Double the Tonnage Of the Jim Butler Mine

Clyde A. Heller, president of the Jim Butler and Tonopah Belmont secured some this morning after spending three days here looking after the interests of his companies. Mr. Heller was enthusiastic over the outlook for the camp, and predicted that the Jim would double its output through the use of the Desert Queen shaft, which began hoisting ore this morning.

TONOPAH BOY RECOUPS HIMSELF IN TEN ROUNDS OF LIVELY FIGHTING

A crash of ring-side seats that topped over two score people and narrowly escaped serious consequences was a prelude to the fight at the Nevada theater last night when Fred Lydon got the decision over Wildcat Altman. This caused a delay of nearly an hour and the performance did not close until almost 11 o'clock. The seats had been erected in the most flimsy manner, without any braces, and when the enthusiasm of the occupants began to show in the stamping of feet the structure swayed and then fell with a crash. Eleven rows of seats were wrecked and the spectators fell in a heap that resulted in nothing more than a few bruises and scratches.

FIRE DESTROYS A TWO STORY RESIDENCE

EARLY MORNING BLAZE WELL HANDLED BY THE FIRE MEN.

Fire destroyed the two-story residence of Joe Monahan at Charles and Bryan at 4:30 Thursday morning. The house was not occupied and the loss is estimated at $2000. Calls for an insurance of $1500, and a policy of $1500 in the Scottish Union was written by Grant Crumley. The interior was gutted.

Mrs. Monahan was at the home of a neighbor next door and the house was supposed to be occupied by a painter known as "George."

The cause of the fire is unknown and probably nothing will be learned to enlighten the public on this score. It was surmised that crossed wires might have been responsible, but the power company has no record of any connections with the house. Wiring was installed some time ago by a painter for his own convenience and it is hinted that in running the wires from an adjoining house he may have failed to look after the insulation. George was not there when the fire occurred, as he was found by Officer Daiseil in the lower quarter of the city an hour after the department returned home.

The alarm was given by the watchman on the Montana, who fired three shots. The fire wagon turned out and laid two lines of hose. After they got water some of the other nine watchmen saw the blaze and started their whistles, which gave the impression that another fire had broken out. There was a high wind at the time, but the boys under Chief Kelly did good work and prevented the flames from spreading.

The Monahan house has been offered for sale at a bargain and had been redecorated and overhauled at a considerable expense. It contained eleven rooms.

The house was built by the Construction company, a concern that was known to all in the early days of the camp. Then the property went into the hands of the receiver of the Nye and Ormsby County bank and was sold by S. R. Moore & Co. to Monahan.

"The mine is better than ever, but it is down to a routine basis that every day means a duplication of the previous day."

"Will the Belmont use the Desert Queen shaft to increase its tonnage?"

"No, the Belmont will use the Desert Queen for development on the western end of that property, as we have never given much attention to that section, and this gives us a chance to get at that end. The shaft, however, will be used for the Jim Butler, which should begin hoisting ore today. By the Desert Queen shaft the tonnage will be doubled and the company will save 33 cents a ton by sending it direct to the plant at Millers. Both the Desert Queen and Wandering Boy shafts will be kept busy. The annual report of the Jim Butler shows a balance of $125,694, having jumped from $2965 in the course of a year, and that company is in better shape than ever before. I don't know exactly the size of the Butler ledge, but where the Tonopah Mining company left off the vein showed 80 feet of $20 ore and I do not think there has been any change in the size."

During the year there was produced 19,556 wet tons of ore and shipped to the Belmont Mining company. The realizations were:

	Tons.	Value.
Ore to mill	18,900	$374,903
Ore stock added to stock on hand	281	9,054
Totals	19,181	$383,957
Loss in extraction value realized		38,389
		$345,568
Mining expense	$98,342
Transportation	19,752
Milling charges	117,802
General expense, tax	6,990
		$242,886
Realization from operation	$102,682
Realization from machinery sold	2,000
Total net		$104,682

During the year 6520 feet of development work was done. The workings on the sixth level of the Wandering Boy shaft are entirely in trachyte, the ore-bearing formation, with the exception that in the north cross-cut from the winze on the seventh level, at a distance of 120 feet from the vein, a block of West End rhyolite has been encountered, which probably has no effect on the Fraction vein.

An estimate of ore reserves from exact evidence would be warranted. Because of the fact that on the lower levels there are no threatening occurrences of foreign rock, it is expected that the ore bodies will continue to greater depth, and it may be expected that, from the Fraction and other veins, a much greater tonnage will be extracted than could at present be estimated, even as possible ore.

A series of profitable years is confidently hoped for.

The net profits of the company for October were $6109, as compared with $8494 in September, and a deficit of about $900 in August.
